Fund highlights for July 2025

The Fund performed well in July, up +0.5%, ahead of the benchmark which was up +0.3%. The main highlights driving this were generally strong performance from corporate bonds, where credit spreads fell, driving bond prices higher.

In Macro news, the Reserve Bank held the official cash rate steady at 3.25% - the first 'no change' announcement since rate cuts began roughly one year ago. The bank pause is unlikely to last though, as the meeting for early August has the market pricing an over 90% chance of a cut to 3.0%. The driving factor was late July's weaker than anticipated inflation data, with annual changes now likely coming closer towards the RBNZ's 2% target sooner than previously thought.

Highlights for the month included exits from two corporate bond positions after strong returns over the last year. Charter Communications bonds benefitted from a reduction in borrowing as the company sought to acquire a competitor (Cox) earlier this year. This helped push up bond prices as investors became more confident in the financial strength of the business. As a result, Charter bonds returned over 7.5% during the last year, ahead of the benchmark (+5.2%). We exited the position after the strong run, selling at a yield of 4.7% which we think is relatively unattractive.

Grifols was an even stronger performer, up more than 9% year to date. At times this investment has been a detractor to the fund, as the road to pre-covid earnings was rockier than expected. 2025 proved to be worth the wait however as earnings accelerated on the back of strong cost controls. This provided a strong foundation for yields to fall from 6.75% to about 4.5%, driving bond prices higher and leading us to sell our bonds to reinvest elsewhere.

Our largest detractor for the month was Gartner where our 2028 bonds lagged the stronger performers above. Gartner provides research services globally, leveraging a unique dataset for industries that require hard data to make critical investment decisions. While the company is still seeing earnings growth, the market is beginning to worry about the impact that advanced AI models may have on their business. We're doing a deep dive to investigate whether this might impact their ability to repay their debts. This will help inform our positioning for Gartner and other AI-impacted issuers in the coming months.

Fund highlights for July 2025

The Property and Infrastructure Fund rose +0.6% in July, compared to its benchmark of +2.8%.

CMS Energy (+6.5%) reported second-quarter earnings which modestly met market expectations. Investors had been concerned about the impact of lower renewable tax incentives after the passage of President Trumps "One Big Beautiful Bill" in July. Despite a modest earnings impact from this event, it was outweighed by strong operating performance and a new data centre deal. Regulatory risk eased as key return-levels were approved, as well as a mechanism for recovering storm costs from customers. CMS announced a 1GW data centre deal with a hyperscale customer, validating CMS's 9GW data centre pipeline. CMS sees potential capital investment upside from increasing electricity demand, which could further improve the future earnings outlook.

American Tower (-5.7%) reported second quarter earnings, which were in line with expectations, and lifted full-year earnings guidance. The improved outlook is due to strength in American Tower's international towers and Coresite data centre business, together with favourable foreign exchange rates. Despite the improving earnings outlook, the stock sold off on the result, primarily due to softness in new business within American Tower's core US tower business. A key customer was upgrading its tower portfolio slower than expected. The impact was modest (less than 0.1% of revenue) but indicates a slower acceleration in growth than the market had hoped for after a few years of subdued new business activity.

Up close & personal

The Fund invests in companies on the basis of their individual merits. For some companies our investment thesis is also supported by "mega-trends" which support long-term returns from property and infrastructure assets.

Mobile Cell Networks cell towers are increasingly important infrastructure assets in an ever-connected and digitally-enabled world.

They receive income from mobile phone operators who are dependent on them to install network equipment and ensure wide network coverage. By enabling an essential service for modern-day consumers these businesses are defensive as well as having an attractive structural growth profile as mobile data consumption continues to grow. The networks have high barriers to entry which creates a wide moat, reducing the threat of new competitors.

Fund highlights for July 2025

The New Zealand Growth Fund returned +0.7% in July, compared to its benchmark of +1.8%.

Mainfreight (-10%) provided a 17-week trading update at its Annual Shareholders Meeting. This showed an unexpectedly large fall in profit before tax of -24% versus the corresponding week of the prior year, with a decline in all three products: Transport, Warehousing, and Air & Ocean freight forwarding. The company didn't provide its usual regional breakdown of performance. Mainfreight referenced the shorter trading weeks in April and May and tariff uncertainty during the period, and alluded to trading improving into June and July, although did not provide any figures to quantify this. The company pointed to new business wins of $65 million in the period, although this has been offset by downtrading of existing customers to the tune of $38 million. Market conditions have been competitive, with revenue growth of around +1.5%, a sharp deceleration from the +14% in the six months to March 2025, across all three products. This prolongs the period where the company's longer term organic growth strategy has been overshadowed by tough market conditions.

Fisher & Paykel Healthcare (FPH, +2%) hosted an investor day in Melbourne featuring discussions with Australian clinicians across hospital's neonatal, emergency, anaesthesia, and ward settings where its respiratory support products are used. This demonstrated FPH's progress in changing clinical practice, as well as providing the opportunity to speak to members of the wider management team. Australia has been an early-adopter market for the company and so it provided proof-of-concept that its therapies can continue to see greater penetration throughout the hospital setting. The day was well attended and while there was little by way of new product announcements or business forecasts, it was a good reminder of FPH's strong business fundamentals. The company continues to demonstrate quality leadership, a genuine long-term sustainable horizon and a substantial runway for further earnings growth.

Summerset (+2%) delivered a strong June quarter trading update, with total unit sales up +21% on the same period last year, driven by a record for new sales. Summerset is making solid progress selling down its St Johns project in Auckland with both settled sales and contracting rates continuing to progress well.

Matt Peek describes the appealing aspects of Mainfreight.

What does it do?

Mainfreight is a global supply chain logistics company. Its services primarily span domestic transport, managed warehousing, and international air and sea freight. Its operations span New Zealand, Australia, the Americas, Europe, and Asia.

Why do we own it?

Mainfreight is a very well-run company with a special company culture that has delivered strong performance over time. It continues to open new trade lanes as it spreads its logistics footprint ever wider. Growth should come organically as it takes market share and works further towards its 100-year vision of becoming a leading global logistics provider.

Fund highlights for July 2025

The Australian Growth Fund rose +3.4% in July, ahead of the benchmark index which rose +2.7%.

The Australian share market continued rising in July as tariff and trade war concerns abated further (albeit significant uncertainty on global trade remains). The share market rally was broad based with 10 out of 11 sectors ending the month in positive territory.

Private equity firm PEP entered an agreement to acquire Johns Lyng (+23%) for $4 per share. This was one of our best performing companies in the month. The Board has unanimously recommended that shareholders vote in favour of the deal. The transaction has been structured to enable management, including CEO Scott Didier, to retain their shares post deal. This will ensure that management remains strongly incentivised to drive further value for PEP should they be successful in closing the deal.

Domino's (-5.2%) was one of our worst performing companies. The share price fell following the announcement that CEO Mark van Dyck (who only started in his role in late 2024) is stepping down. The Board seems happy with his strategy of rationalising the store base in poor performing jurisdictions such as Japan and France. He is also seeking to lift operating efficiency and cut costs across the business. However, the scale and pace of these improvements seem to be less than what the Board would like. Consequently, they have made the call to replace Mark and speed up the operational improvement of the company.

Robbie Urquhart describes one of our companies: SEEK

What does it do?

SEEK operates the largest online employment marketplace in Australia, New Zealand, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand. It also has minority investments in similar online employment marketplace businesses in China, South Korea and a number of other countries. Through its SEEK Growth Fund, it has investments in high growth technology businesses across HR SaaS, Education and Contingent Labour.

Why do we own it?

In Australia, New Zealand and across its South East Asian marketplaces SEEK has a strong competitive position by virtue of being "front of mind" for job seekers. It will continue to benefit from the migration of employment advertising from traditional media to online. Domestically, successful development of new products like its talent search platform will provide high value new revenue streams. Its international investments give SEEK exposure to faster-growing, less mature employment markets.

Fund highlights for July 2025

The International Growth Fund fell -0.1% in July, compared to its benchmark of +3.2%.

Icon (+19.6%) and its clinical outsourcing peers had a strong month as end demand for clinical research has stabilised following several quarters of weakness, as pharmaceutical and biotech customers optimise spend in the face of competitive and regulatory headwinds. Icon anticipates the backdrop to continue improving as we go through the year.

Alphabet (+12.0%) was a positive contributor during July, supported by a good earnings result at the end of the month. Alphabet's main business units - Search, YouTube and Google Cloud Platform - all outperformed expectations. Google Search had better than expected growth and is benefitting from AI tailwinds as it rolls out new features such as AI Overviews, AI Mode and visual search. Google Cloud Platform also performed well in the quarter where it accelerated growth driven by customers running more AI workloads on the platform.

ASML (-10.6%) reduced its growth guidance for next year as tariff uncertainty and macroeconomic concerns weighed on its customers' willingness to commit to orders of its lithography machines used to manufacture advanced semiconductor chips. We believe this is largely cyclical, with structural demand for leading-edge chips expected to continue growing and used this weakness to add to our position.

While Intuitive Surgical (-12.0%) reported continued strength in procedure growth, unit sales of its DaVinci surgical robots were slightly below expectations, as health systems in Europe, China and Japan are increasingly cautious in making large capital expenditures. The US, which makes up most of Intuitive's revenue, continues to be strong, supported by the highly anticipated launch of its new DV5 robotic system.

Sam Dickie looks at Alphabet, the parent company of tech giant Google.

What does it do?

Alphabet is the holding company which owns the world's leading internet search provider, Google. Google is the world's most visited website and the largest global advertising platform by advertising revenue.

Why do we own it?

Alphabet has wide moats arising from its dominant position in online search, significant intellectual property and a strong brand. We believe Alphabet is well-positioned to grow strongly as global advertising budgets gradually shift away from television to digital formats.

Mixed Asset Portfolios Fact Sheet

as at 31 July 2025

What are mixed asset portfolios?

Our mixed asset portfolios let you easily invest your money across a range of assets. These include property and shares from both New Zealand and overseas markets, as well as lower risk asset classes like cash and fixed interest. All you have to do is work out which of the three investment options is right for you - conservative, balanced, or growth.

Our Investment Team actively manage these funds, doing the hard work so you don't have to. The team closely monitor the economy, market conditions and investment performance and adjust the investment mix when they need to in order to balance risk and return.

Diversification can lead to better returns and less risk over time. With multiple investments there will be less impact if one investment doesn't perform as well as expected. We have created a suite of investment options that are already diversified for you.

Working out the right investment option

If you need help to work out the right investment option for you, our team of qualified advisers are here to help you build a portfolio to achieve your goals. It won't cost you anything to speak to an adviser and there is no obligation to go ahead with the investment.
